THE AMERICAN WAR.

In the House of Commons, July 25, Mr. Lindsay asked the First Lord of the Treasury if, considering the great sacrifice of property occasioned by the war still raging between the United States and Great Britain, and the States and considering the loss the people of this country had suffered by the war, it was the intention of her Majesty's Government to concert with the other Powers of Europe, to use their endeavours to bring about a suspension of hostilities.

Vicount Palmerston said he could assure his hon. friend that the Government were not at all disposed to interfere in property in America, and the distress which the war had produced in this country. But they had not thought that, in the present state of things, there was any advantage to be gained by entering into concert with any other Powers for the purpose of offering our mediation, or in any other way endeavouring by communication with the governments of the United States and Great Britain to bring about a suspension of the hostilities in question.

RANDWICK SPRING MEETING, 1864.
THIRD DAY.—SATURDAY.
 SATURDAY was as fine a day as could well be desired for cut-door sport of any description. The few casual showers that had fallen on the previous day had left the ground in a most favorable condition for the day.

although during the two preceding days the clouds had threatened a heavy downfall—had been sufficient to render the air fresh and balmy, to unfold the bush flowers, and to add their fragrance to the north-east breeze that came pouring in and neutralising the otherwise fierce rays of the sun. It was, moreover, a half-holiday, fixed not only by regulation, in so far as Government officials are concerned, but by prescriptive usage as regards everything that slurs at the dignity of a mercantile establishment. Mere shops keep open until all manner of ridiculous hours on Saturday night, whilst the "office," the establishment that blanches at the very sound of that odious word "shop," closes invariably at one on the Saturday. Need it be wondered at, then, that the attendance was larger on Saturday than on the two preceding days.

Officialism was let loose and asserted itself with becoming dignity, overturning the Course and contending for mastery and pre-eminence, even with the seamen of H. M. S. Curragh, who, however, not so much from largeness of numbers as from uniformity of dress and superior discipline, had decidedly the best of it.

the middle classes than there had been on either of the two preceding days. And we say "middling," rather than "middle," because the class we refer to is only an approach to the middle class, being a kind of first step towards it from what is sometimes called the lower class, a title which in these democratic days we should never dream of applying anywhere, especially at a race meeting, where it is the first that comes to mette upon a level footing, and where, even in those far of beighted days recorded by Dibdin, prinows, blacklegs, lords, and jockies rub shoulders and mingle in harmonious confusion. The taxed cart had the best of it on Saturday, whether as regarded number of vehicles, number of passengers, mettle of horses, or general spiciness of appearance.

There was something classic in the style in which some of three vehicles were driven, especially on the return from the course, the charioteer astride upon the shafts or standing erect as a grenadier on duty, driving at a pace to leave three and even four horsemen behind, with women and children freighted the vehicle to the utmost and waving helplessly from side to side in a way to show that children at all events were no possible object—all this was classic, reminding one forcibly of the old Olympic games.

when a broken back was considered an honor, and was never followed by that disagreeable sequel that Anglo-Saxon prejudices have rendered inevitable to an accident. Of course we allude to coroners' inquests, which, we may remark, were unknown to the ancient Greeks. The cabs, handsome, also came out in much stronger force on Saturday, and the number of mews outside omnibuses was greatly increased. On the previous days the visitors had been conveyed to the ground exclusively by the well-appointed and nicely boxed vehicles of Howard, Moore, and some few others of the better known bus proprietors; but Saturday last saw on the road horses and vehicles that would have put even Mosley Hurst on a battle-day to the blush. The heavily freighted "buses" drawn by the one lank, miserable, broken-down and utterly heartless and dispirited animal between the shafts, were certainly a most serious caution to Chinamen, who, believing in the metempsychosis, ought to be very careful lest they be hereafter doomed to the life of a bullock horse.

yesterday a very much larger number of persons took in either of the preceding days; but still, not so large a number as there have been on the course, or that there had been expected to visit the course. They were all, however, bent upon enjoyment, and it was a gratification to look upon as many faces that could look happy and smiling in spite of the much talked-of depression and gloom. Nay, more, it was even better to look upon that large mass of persons there assembled, and to be able to search amongst them without finding one glaring case of drunkenness, although carefully looked for. There were all manner of little dodges for catching the pence or loose silver of the thoughtless or the unwary, from the comparatively innocent Aunt Sally, to the dubious skittles, and to the certainly swindling U. O., the professors of which, in the face of all evidence, maintain and even declare, "winning is all that counts."

previous knowledge and experience, particularly aware of it to be the "fairest game on the course." There were the usual number of extraordinary men, with faces blackened, and with faces—we were going to say white, but we prefer to say—of doubtful colour, with banjos or tambourines or something or other, with boys or girls that could sing or dance or tumble, and who made the mid-children sing and dance and tumble throughout the day.

whilst they carefully gathered in the coppers that a boor-volent and discriminating public showered upon them.
There were dealers in pastry, who actually had the honesty to charge no more than the Sydney prices for their wares,
and there were dealers in uneatable nuts, worm-eaten dates, musty figs, who forced sales by the loudness of their vociferations, the smartness of their repartees, and the conviction of their craft. In fact, there was everything but may, however, mention that both Tarragon and Ben Jon were loudly cheered as they left the weighing yard and entered upon the course, and that on coming in there was many a cheer for Ramornie also, owing to the gallant way in which he had run the favourite.

His Excellency the Governor again visited the course on Saturday.

We now proceed to give a resume of the races on Saturday:—

First Race. The Prince of Wales Stakes, of 5 sovereigns

Mr. W. Town's ch. g. Premier, 5 years, £50, 7 st. 4 lb. (W. Moore) ... 1
P. Sallieorn's ch. g. Dick Turpin, 5 years, £50, 7 st. 6 lb. (Colley) ... 2
C. Deal's ro. h. Wonder, 6 years, £50, 7 st. 13 lb. (J. Ford) ... 3

J. Outry's b. g. g. Almack's, 6 years, £50, 8 at 2 lb.
P. M. Doyle's b. g. Sameon, 4 years, £50, 8 at 2 lb.
C. Morris's b. c. The Wizard, 4 years, £50, 6 at 12 lb.
P. Hinchey's b. g. Dispatch, aged, £50, 9 at 1 lb.
A. Bowman's ch. m. Deedemona, 5 years, £50, 8 at 2 lb.
P. B. Hurley's br. m. Woodbine, 5 years, £50, 7 at 1 lb.
G. D. Lane's ch. g. Cock-a-hoop, aged, £50, 7 at 10 lb.

Betting—even on Dick Turpin; from 2 to 1 to 5 to 1

As indicated in the betting Dick Turpin was the favorite for this race, and it was confidently anticipated that he would win it in a canter. Owing, however, to his obduracy in starting, he was left about fifty yards in the rear before he could be prevailed on to follow the rank when he flag fell, and this lost ground was too much for him to make up, so that there is little doubt he would have pulled off the prize. From the stand the start appeared to be an indifferent one, a very considerable distance separating the first and last horses immediately the lot got away. In passing the stand the first time, Premier was leading by a length, with Deadendona lying second, and Dispatch two or three lengths behind him, the others following in Indian file. After this, Premier was well caught, but held a strong lead throughout. At the end of the course, Daedemona resigned her place to Dick Turpin, and Wonder having passed the mare and Dappet raced Dick for second place. In this order they ran, Dick being a very good second, and Wonder an indifferent third—all the others eighteen or twenty lengths behind. Time, 3 minutes 23 seconds.

if the next day is apt to come late, and cannot do the Long hours of work are also more frequent in the smaller establishments than in those on a large scale. The general testimony of both employers and employed proves beyond all doubt that long hours and over-time are the prevailing custom in the trade. On this point, I can speak from personal experience. The working people, especially children, will run as much labour under a system of moderate and regular hours, with a much greater ease, as under a system of over-time. I have seen many children and young people more apt than even in the older ones. They lose no taste for home; and, young as they are, their tastes are not confined to the theatre, the concert, and dancing-room, the penny-show, the beer-shop, and the street. In some cases, as in that of the Hirkley hosiery workers, the evils of child-labour, over-time, and irregular hours of employment, are not confined to the children, but extend to the whole class of hand-workers against the improved machinery which has found its way into the trade. They may be said to occupy a position similar to that of the sewing-machine; and, as a rule, are gradually becoming absorbed in other trades. The one great obstacle, however, which prevents the majority of workers in an ill-paid trade from entering with facility into the ranks of the better-paying trades, is their want of education. The deficiency of education, a deficiency occasioned by their early employment in factories and workshops. Unless the education is supplied to the children, they will be unable to rise out of their very little chance of procuring it afterwards. If by any means we could extend the blessings of education to the children now employed in factories and other places where there is difficulty of procuring education, Mr. Heyman, late manufacturer of Nottingham, observes that "if education were once generally enforced throughout the country for a short period, it would be so generally valued that there would be no danger of its being lost."

"If the social and moral condition of the working-classes is to be permanently improved, we must begin with the children. This is a fact generally admitted, and only the question of the manner should be debated, and whether legislative action is required. The general testimony of employers goes to show that child labour up to the age of eleven or twelve, can in a great measure be dispensed with, and that the children are not only capable of the same quality of employing it; but that this can only be accomplished by legislative enactment, especially in the case of small establishments. It may also be said that the children are not capable of doing more than eight hours of labour; in fact it is found to be almost indispensable to the proper working of a well-conducted factory, as the employers find it cheaper and more profitable to employ ten men during regular hours, than to employ twelve men during over-time. Over-time work is also accompanied with many objections, which render it the interest of the employer to dispense with it as much as possible. It occasions an increase of wear and tear of machinery, and produces a much larger amount of unnecessary wear and tear of machinery; while the actual labour itself is the least productive. Mr. Wills, late manager of Nottingham, speaking on this point says: 'The over-time work of the children, and of the night work of a person who works late at night has the effect of

EXTENSIVE SALE.
CITY AND SUBURBAN FREEHOLD.

DARLINGHURST ROAD.—First-class newly-erected dwelling-house, occupied by Mr. Parks, on the Darlinghurst Road, Victoria-street, nearly opposite Kirton House.

KENT-STREET AND CHARLOTTE-PLACE.—Four allotments of land, nearly opposite the residence of Mr. Whiting, and at the corner of the above streets.

DEVONSHIRE AND JOHN STREETS, SURREY HILLS.—Two-story dwelling-house, at the corner of the above streets.

CLEVELAND-STREET, CHIPPENDALE.—Corner building allotments, adjoining Mr. Chandler's property.

NEWTON RAILWAY STATION.—Small brick cottage, Oxford-street, Kingston, occupied by Mrs. Brown, close to the station.

SHEA'S CREEK, BOTANY.—11 acres 3 rods rich swamp land, near the station.

DARLINGHURST ROAD.—24 feet to the Darlinghurst Road, with a depth of about 100 feet, on which is a recently-erected FIRST-CLASS DWELLING-HOUSE, now occupied by Mr. Parks, at a rental of £100 per annum. It is very substantially built of brick on stone foundations, with slate roof, and contains hall, verandah, two large rooms divided by folding doors, and two kitchens on the ground floor; drawing-room, five bedrooms, and bathroom on the upper floors, with large yard, shed, &c., at the rear.

This is a very superior well-finished city property, built for the vendor by Mr. Blake, under the supervision of Mr. Weaver, architect. No expense has been spared in completing it in the most costly manner, and the whole will bear minute inspection. The position on the heights of Darlinghurst is one of the most valuable in the city, and the sale, which will be positive, is worthy the attention of those desiring an unusually good residence, or a permanent investment.

On both sides of the house is a party wall, which the purchaser will have the right of disposing of to the adjoining proprietors.
